Arsip Nasional Republik Indonesia (ANRI) preserves 2.5 kilometres of archives dating from the early modern period 1600-1800, created by the General Secretariat of the VOC in Batavia Castle, and the local urban institutions of Batavia. Together these collections are called 'VOC Archives'. Researchers can explore a selection of the main series online. Browse over 100,000 entries and discover thousands of references to persons and places, facts and events, and find what you need for your research.

The VOC archives include literally thousands of letters and documents written by Asians. Unfortunately, the original documents (many beautifully decorated diplomatic letters) written in Javanese, Malay, Sundanese, Chinese, Arab or Persian were not preserved. The Daily Journal of Batavia Castle (1624-1807) is one of the richest collections. All 165 volumes of around 80,000 digital images will be made available over time on the website (sejarah-nusantara.anri.go.id).
